

religious hostilities of our past. The United States has finally ended the longest war in American history, as its after effects continue to spin further out of control. And the insane budget of the Military Industrial Complex is a gross misuse of tax dollars, where trillions go unaccounted for. The average US Taxpayer sent $3,456 to the Pentagon in 2017 and Just $39 to the EPA for environmental causes.¹ On top of all this, anyone viewing the cyclical nature of human history and recent headlines with right and left wing candidates itching for more war, will see the danger on our horizon of provoking a 3rd World War apocalyptic nightmare.

¹ Common Dreams <http://bit.ly/2lDmW4>

But the question is, how bad will it be? Is surviving World War III in our fate, or the devastation of Earth in Armageddon? Or is there a better scenario available? Perhaps it's possible we could create a timeline that avoids the nightmare of an End Times taught in the Quran, Revelation promoted in the Bible and World War III depicted in the secular story of Star Trek.

Until we change the system and tap into the infinite possibilities of the global mind to create a much better story for our fate, we will remain stumped by the fragmented old ways of thinking about and imagining our future. We must unite America and our world around a more beautiful dream for our destiny, so we are not stuck reliving the past, dooming ourselves to a self fulfilling prophecy. Let us bypass the lesser and greater evils completely by correcting our course; building bridges over the gulf of hostility between red and blue states & the religious and secular divide.

It is time that we rise together and choose a better path forward; to change the system with a beautiful dream that prevents the nightmare, showing how we have more in common for peace than irreconcilable differences for war.

America Transformed through World Spirit; the elevated consciousness of millions of Americans from progressive and conservative families, whose global vision was shaped by the spiritual side of America. (electronics industrial complex and industry of dreams) The global country is Martin Luther King's Dream Reborn for the entire Earth. (earthpledge.net) The global mind is the free and open Internet; equivalent to the modern day Library of Alexandria, which we all must defend. The Alex Grey sticker on top (alexgrey.com) reminds us of E pluribus unum for all humanity; "out of many, one!" And the Entheon guardian stickers (cosm.org) reference the higher powers of the universe, favoring evolution while transforming regression. The Starship Enterprise rising out of Apple Inc's new headquarters is symbolic for the secular dream of humanity (doing what we are capable of) where the capital of America on the right, is replaced by the capital of Starfleet on the left in the progressive city of San Francisco and birthplace of a future (A.I. super intelligence) in Silicon Valley. As the military industrial complex continues adding to its destructive arsenal of weapons capable of destroying every human being, the last three decades has quietly seen the electronics industrial complex assemble the means to empower every human being. It is within the realm of possibility in the distant future, that Apple or its Android successor may one day put the equivalent of an internet connected super computer/HoloLens in the hands of every person on the planet as their (science tricorder) or passport to world citizenship; a unified crew of spaceship Earth. Imagine the mass production (entirely with machines) of a super computer running an OS connected to a global network, that completely does away with the need for traditional government.

Features: HoloLens contact lens integration • Projected keyboard option • Solar powered with 1 minute battery charge • 1 petabyte (1,000 terabytes) solid state hard drive • Front facing 8k4k ultra HD camera • Back facing 50 megapixel full light spectrum super 12K camera • 100 decibel stereo • 24-bit/96 kHz microphone • 30-qubit quantum processor • Organic OLED 400 PPI retina display with switch between light diode and sun illuminated screen • Universal translation between every human language on the fly • Super fast connection to Earth's free global network from anywhere on the planet • Free access to Alexandria 1.0; a growing database archiving every book ever written, every song ever composed, every movie ever made and every game ever played • Free pass for enrollment as student in Earth University 1.0 with unlimited access to millions of video conference classes • Free video call service to every state on Earth • Star Trek inspired Tricorder with over 10 scientific measuring instruments • Digital democracy 1.0 with full participation in a global community by and for the people of planet Earth everywhere without exceptions. No distinctions made between differing race, class, religion, culture, geographical location, gender, language, political affiliation or sexual orientation. • Constant voice activated connection to global AI super intelligence, with full internet integration

THE FIGHT FOR OUR FUTURE

When it comes to thinking about our future, mainstream America has traditionally favored two avenues in the secular and religious landscape. On the religious right, we have Christianity expressing a vision about our future guided by the Bible and the book of Revelation. On the secular left, Star Trek has recently celebrated its 50th anniversary and is guided by old episodes, movies and now new TV series released in 2017, 2020, 2021 and 2022; Star Trek Discovery, Picard, Lower Decks, Prodigy and Strange New Worlds.

Many have seen secular memes expressing disdain for the religious, or church signs reflecting their contempt for humanism.

Both Star Trek and Christianity may seem incompatible at first glance, but if we take a deeper look, we may find striking similarities.

We can see both secular and religious stories of our future, share the commonality of a horrendous nightmare before the world is united and humanity joined together in peace and prosperity.

StarTrek's timeline sees World War III begin in 2026, going on to 2053 and resulting in the destruction of 600 million people.

The Star Trek paradigm sees humankind taking action to bring about a utopian age.

In the Star Trek timeline, first contact between Earth and Vulcan is instrumental in bringing about the next phase of human evolution.

This fact of course begs the question, does the secular and interreligious divide have anything to do with triggering this terrible war? Unfortunately, we can see signs of this conflict all around the world. Atheist bloggers have been attacked in Asia and anti-Semitism is on the rise in the United States and Europe. Meanwhile, fanatical Christian and extremist Muslim animosity towards each other and secularism, is at an all time high. It's not difficult to see these conflicts exploding into the kind of violence that could create a dire near future much like Star Trek and Christianity envision it.

Even if some fear we are stuck with no good options for a future to believe in, isn't it honest to see one side as clearly the better choice? Surviving World War III is far more desirable than going through Armageddon, a fight against the Anti-Christ and a third of humankind destroyed! Until we figure out how to create an even better story for our future to replace what we have, we will forever be relegated to

The Bible's timeline sees Armageddon start between now and the next generation, killing over 2.3 billion people.

The Bible sees a messianic force from the outside coming to bring about the heavenly age.

The Bible sees the church (bride of Christ) as instrumental in helping God bring about the next phase in our world's rebirth.

choosing between the lesser evil. But even if this is the case, shouldn't we still be clear about why one side is a more desirable choice than the other? The material and financial capital of America is on the right coast with Wall St. as symbol of financial power and Washington D.C. along with the Pentagon as symbolic hub for political power and the military industrial complex. This is the side that controls the populace with legislation geared to ensure the continuation of their power; the people are forced to pay taxes even for wars and policies they disagree with.

Even if they don't deserve its grace, corrupt material powers of this side are nourished by the more feminine oriented left coast. Not only are they supplier of a huge portion of the produce and food nurturing our health, they also specialize in spiritual industries that nourish our spirits through the arts. In the film and music industries, imagination rules; the greater the creativity of the dream, the greater chance for a blockbuster movie, video game or hit album that inspires all of us. On the west coast of America in the state of California, a Pentagon-sized building just found completion. Apple Inc's new headquarters will be lacking the sharp angles of its military opposite and will instead be a more graceful circle. From the air it will remind science fiction fans of the early stages of the Starship Enterprise saucer section. And on this side, the Electronics Industrial Complex serves as vehicle for transmitting these dreams into our consciousness 24/7 with machines not to destroy, but empower the populace and challenge material corruption. For contrary to first appearances reflecting only surfaces, it is the spiritual side with the potential to wield the greatest power through the transcendent depths of true vision. And this vision is capable of compelling the right coast to reign in its corruption, using its material dominance not for ill, but to empower and protect the good intentions of the left. And these good intentions find their form in subtle messages conveyed through art.

Because a blatant challenge to the power of the right coast is often met with hostility, the spiritual messages transmitted in films, games and the art of the left take the form of metaphor and analogy in order to raise the spiritual consciousness of those who are enslaved by material corruption. Not all films and artistic endeavors of the left coast are infused with the true depths of spiritual vision, but for those that are, we often feel liberated and empowered after experiencing their beauty. And influence from the hope they promote, hold a greater sway over us than the fear generated from the other side. Released in 2015, Tomorrowland is an example of a film whose message raised the spiritual consciousness of its audience. One of the main characters discovers a tachyon machine transmitting a negative frequency into everyone's mind, convincing the whole world to feed the wrong wolf and create a self fulfilling prophecy of destruction.

Could it be that something similar might be happening in America and our world? We are told in the U.S. that this is the "Land of the Free" and to "Support Our Troops" because "Freedom isn't Free." But if we were really free, wouldn't we be allowed to choose more than just our political affiliation? Why are we not free to choose a peace or war tax bracket? Instead, we are forced to pay and feed the wrong wolf for wars of choice making us less secure by stirring up ancient

Avatar 2009